When the duke's carriage was in front of the courts of justice, where the walls of the triangle approach forming a narrow entrance to the Nikolsky gate, a man clad in workman's attire stepped forward from the sidewalk and threw a bomb which he had concealed beneath his coat. Police officials rapidly gathered, but before anything could be done towards collecting the scattered fragments of the body, Grand Duchess Elizabeth drove up in an open carriage. She had dropped her work at the headquarters of the Red Cross and sped to the scene of the crime without waiting to don her outer wraps. She broke down entirely at the sight and dropped to her knees, sobbing bitterly.

The assassin was thrown to the ground and stunned by the force of the explosion, but he quickly arose and ran toward the gate, attempting to escape. His haste, and the blood streaming from his face where he had been wounded by fragments of the bomb, attracted the attention of a sergeant of police, who seized him before he could draw his revolver. The man did not deny his crime, but on the contrary, gloried in its success.

THE FORTUNE TELLER."

Some idea of the magnitude of the production of "The Fortune Teller," which is being presented this season under the direction of Milton and Sargent Abron can be gathered from the fact that there are no less than twenty-three changes of costume for the chorus. The production which the Messrs. Abron are using is known to be a most elaborate one for it is the original production which was used by Alice Neilsen and they have added to it. Miss Neilsen spent have added to it. Miss Neilsen spent more than $40,000 on the mountings of the opera. The organization is a large one numbering in its entirety sixty people, and is made up of artists of know ability and reputation.

"The Fortune Teller" is booked to appear at the Paris Grand on Monday evening, February 27.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Hyomei Cures This Common and Disagreeable Disease.

Hyomei cures catarrh by the simple method of breathing it into the air passages and lungs. It kills the germs of the catarrhal poison, heals and soothes the irritated mucus membrane, enters the blood with the oxygen and kills the germs present there gen and kills the germs present there, effectually driving the disease from the system.

If you have any of the following symtoms, catarrhal germ are at work somewhere in the mucous membrane of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes or tissues of the lungs discharge from the offensive breath dryness of the nose stoppage of the pain across the nose at night eyes aching of the body pain in back of the droppings in the throat head the blood and additional ozone, and after a few days use of this treatment the majority of these symptoms will have disappeared. In a few weeks the cure will be complete.

Catarrh or catarrhal colds cannot exist when Hyomei is used. This is a strong statement, but Clarke & Co. emphasize it by agreeing to refund you money if Hyomei does not cure.

Five seconds more and the error was had taken the wrong road somewhere south of Chantilly and, instead of rejoining their squadron, had stumbled on the pickets. There was more or less zoldier recrimination, but, quickly as possible, the wounded officer was borne in a blanket to a neighboring farmhouse, and a trooper galloped to Gainesville for a surgeon. Ladue spent a sleepless and miserable night, was exonerated by his division commander and Stuart when the matter was investigated next day, but was so utterly broken up over the affair that permission was given him to go back again and remain with Chilton until he could be moved.

Ladue, nearly mad with misery, was hopefully awaiting the coming of an ambulance on the third day when his patient suddenly took a turn for the worse. The division surgeon said it would be a serious matter to take him that long ride back to Warrenton and suggested Ladue's going over to the home of Judge Armistead at Hopewell and arranging to have the lad moved thither. This was on the eighth of March, and up to noon they had no sign of soldiers coming from the east or north.

So Paul had gone, never counting on Chilton's taking the bit in his teeth. And when late at night he returned to Thornton, weak and weary, he was aghast to learn that with only his body servant and a trooper nurse, Chilton had started southward in the wagon that evening by the Sudley road, bent on escaping from the heralded advance of the union blue. Despite fatigue and failing strength, Ladue followed, saught them at the Henry house, and was within that historic wreck, confulting the owner as to the best roads to follow while the farm wagon, with 1's solitary escort was toiling up the slope from the crossing of the pike, when all on a sudden there came a floud of blue-jacketed, yellow-trimmed troopers sweeping across the field from he southeast, and Mr. Henry had barely time to hide his visitor under the flooring the garret when they were fismounting by the dozen and jovially swarming all over the premises.

Another moment, too, and they had she had but little to say to him, and nurrounded the wagon with its helpless load. Then Averell himself had fidden up to investigate, and one of hour after hour during the long wait his first orders was that the Henry house and grounds were to be protected against all possibility of pillage and vandalism. So it had happened that for two days fairly brightened. It had been settled Paul Ladue lay concealed within the Henry house once when the guard ville and return to the front, but at the was changed hearing voices he recognized as those of men he well knew in the train and, noticing at once how ill peered through a crevice at the coming

All in the uniform of their rank, in frock coats, belts and sashes, gauntlets and forage caps, with regulation about the outer corners of Longstreet's horse equipments—the general and his little staff made gallant show as they breasted the slope. There were only five in all, with three orderlies and no escort, but in three of the five Ladue saw the faces of men whom he had looked up to, honored and esteemed, while the face of the fourth was that of the faithful and devoted friend whom he had loved as David loved Jonathan. Ladue threw himself upon the floor, so sick at heart that it was a relief to sob like a homesick child.

And so Henry found him, when in his stocking feet, a little later, he climbed the ladder to the loft with wonderous news. Dr. Chilton and his daughter were coming-were even then on their way from Warrenton.

Much of the early morning of the following day he spent with Rosalie by the side of the wounded boy. Now that Dr. Chilton had gone on in search of the commanding general, hopeful of permission to take his crippled soldier home, the vital question arose, What was to become of Paul? He had no excuse for parole. He had not been grievously wounded. He was there of his own volition, undiscovered, within the hostile lines, and, though wearing his new and natty uniform and in no sense a spy, still, the lot of southern prisoner in northern hands was a problem yet unsolved. Then Rosalie Chilton, the daring, quick-witted girl, planned the escape so successfully ef-

Little luggage had she brought with her on that hurried journey, but, soon as it was dusk, she doffed the gown and skirt she wore-even the crinoline, at period of our national life regarded as indispensable to the wardrobe of the gentlewoman-then donned a soft wrapper, and ten minutes later, Paul Ladue, shorn of his new uniform, was attiring himself aloft in the traveling dress of a Virginia belle. He wellnigh ruined the whole plan-and crinoline-by putting his foot through the flimsy cage as he searched the stairway, but from the floor below came ominous 'Hush-sh-sh!" in Rosalie's tragic tones, and she shook him almost savagely while giving some finishing touches to his toilet. "How dare you be so careless with my best hoop-skirt, sir? Don't you know that's almost the very last one in Virginia?" Then, duly informed as to the paths in the garden and the exits through the fence, with her shawl over his head and a prayer on her trembling lips she sent him forth, and Jim Ferguson, officer of the guard, bowed to her representative with killing grace-and let him go.

Half an hour later Paul had shed his skirts at the stone house, had had a whispered word with Jennings-he of the subsequent demijohn-and, in some old clothes of that worthy and with a note to a farmer friend back of Groveton, was away en route to Hopewell. By nine he was in saddle, with a horse borrowed of the farmer friend; by ten he had learned that Judge Armistead was at Gainesville, having reached the Thornton farm too late, and there were they both-judge and lieutenant-when the little ambulance train came along in the morning. Such was the story of Ladue's escape from within the union lines. But the story that agitated at least three men was that of Rosalie Chilton. Why should she have essayed her perilous masquerade? Why should she have left her brother and, in the dress of a confederate officer, before the last of the yankees were clear of the plateau, before Stuart's fellows were sure of the Sudley road-why should she have dared that night dash down to the pike? Even in his battered condition Fred Benton found himself pondering over the problem, for he had heard her father urging her to explain-had heard her implore that father not to press the question now.

CHAPTER IX.

ESCAPE POSSIBLE.

It is by no means a far cry from Manassas to Charlottesville as one takes the swift flight in the cosey parlor car of to-day, but it was a different thing in '61, bumping, banging, behind some wheezy old woodburner, in ram-shackle open platform car; yet it was almost heavenly, after two days' tossing and tumbling over the ruts of the Virginia roadways.

It was a soft spring morning that saw the genial doctor's little party entrained at the Rappahannock. Scores of sympathetic fellows in confederate gray surrounded the car to which Lieut, Chilton was borne and into which Fred Benton, his arm in a sling and his head still in bandages, was carefully guided. For reasons not then made known to his Yankee patient, the doctor persisted in treating his case as far more serious than conditions seemed to warrant. Constantly he strove to impress upon Benton the necessity of lying still and speaking as little as possible. Rosalie, too. was forever holding up a tapering finger in warning and pursing her soft, rosy lips in very significant "hush" when he ventured to ask questions or show a disposition to stir. Otherwise our wounded Badger boy had enjoyed the doubtful bliss of watching her at the Junction, hanging about her suffering brother, or with softly flushing cheek, talking in low, eager tone to Paul Ladue, whose melancholy eyes that he should leave them at Gordon-Rappahannock his own colonel boarded and worn he looked, talked with him And again the word was passed from kindly, sympathetically, awhile, and commander. In ten minutes they were rior of Aiminius than a soldier of the eyes, queer little lines would play about them and his bearded lips when humorous fancy struck him, and kindly humor seemed never to be far from that genial face until the bitter day that cost him Pickett's grand and devoted division in Hancock's front at

"I looked to see you in uniform, Miss Chilton," said he, "and I have yet to learn by what authority you have discarded the gray. And this, I believe, is the young gentleman you were personating?" whereat he shook hands very kindly with the shrinking subaltern and thought how very near alike they were in stature. "Colonel Moore tells me you are far too ill to resume duty just yet, Mr. Ladue, so I am going to take the responsibility of bidding you go back to Charlottesville for a week of Miss Chilton's care. Ah, two very distinguished Virginians were shaking hands; but all Fred Benton could see of it was the backs of subordinate officers clustered about him. They went presently and spoke with young Chilton lying on his mattress along the tops of the seats, then came straight to the lonely officer-the only one in blue, reclining toward the rear end of the long vehicle, the object of to four "reliefs" of two girls each-one much silent curiosity but no intrusion whatsoever, and to the prisoner Longstreet spoke as couretously as to the princess holding her little court in mid ear, bidding him be of good cheer.

"Dr. Chilton has told us, sir, of your protecting him from indignity at Centreville, and of all the kindness you did him that night, resulting in your capture. We cannot afford," and here the blue-gray eyes twinkled and the half-hidden lips twitched whimsically. long as he is wounded as you are. Therefore, Dr. Chilton, you will see to his having hospital accommodations. and now, we must have a suitable guard." And here the tall general straightened up, studied earnestly the circle of soldier faces about him until the twinkling eyes rested on the very sweet and rosy features of the one damsel present. Then briefly and in official tone, he finished. "Miss Chilton, I appoint you, until further orders, custodian of Lieut. and Aide-de-Camp Benton, of the federal army."

Verily, as Benton wrote at the time, these were the halcyon days of the war. before ever it had become the grim and deadly earnest they were to know so bitterly and so very soon. The car was cleared of all save passengers, the train was started before he could find words with which to thank the courtly southern general, and the doctor, bending over him, was saying, "You must not discredit my repoht, suh, by looking so much alive as you do at this moment. I represented your case, suh as one requiring constant attention otherwise you might have had to go

And so for a day or two these pleasantries-these courtesies of war prevailed. Then all of Johnston's men remaining north of the Rappahannock came drifting in before a new forward move of the union force along the railway. Howard's strong division of Sumner's corps swept out in reconnaissance, even as the bulk of McClellan's army was being directed on Alexan. dria for the now inevitable swing to the Peninsula between the York and the James-full details of the gathering of every kind of bay and river craft reaching Johnston quite as speedily as they did New York. So that skilled soldier withdrew still further to the line of the Rapidan where he could be nearer Richmond in case of need. Then when Banks should have come down from the Shenandoah and "covered" Washington, up sprang that restless, watchful, prayerful Virginia leader, Jackson, and so stirred the situation in the valleys that Banks and his men had to hurry back through the mountain passes, and further delays and complications arose before April set in and McClellan could sail for Fortress Monroe, and in all the bustle and excitement, the rumors flying hither and yon, the marching to and fro of cavalry and fleet-footed infantry, it happened that for full a fortnight Dr. Chilton and his patients, nurse, guard and all, had settled down to something like peace and physical comfort at cozy, homelike old Charlottesville, and no man sought seriously to hamper or disturb them. From Gainesville Dr. Chilton had penned a letter to be sent through the lines, notifying the commanding general of garret, crept to the westward side and with his long, flowing beard looking of which he was quite testified though more like a hero of Norseland or war- not dangerously wounded-that he was in good hands and would be well cared cavalier south. Even then, before the for, and this news-a great relief-was wrinkles and crows' feet had dug deep promptly transmitted to Fred's general and by him telegraphed to the far western home.

On a well-made stretcher lay the central figure of household and local interest, Lieut. Jack Chilton, slowly but surely gaining strength and spirits with every day. And who wouldn't under similar influences?-for two fair young daughters of the old commonwealth vied with each other in assiduous effort to "entertain" the trooper invalid. Lovely were they both, these cousins of the blood, and most carefully had they been chosen for this special duty by their acknowledged leader, chief of the little clan of kinswomen. Brilliant, beautiful and daring, who of their brave order could lay claim to leadership so long as Rosalie cared to hold it? They followed and obeyed her eagerly, loyally, though in years she was but 18, and five, at least, of the sacred band were her seniors. doctor, I'm glad to see you." And then Ever since the days of short dresses, braids and pinafores, she had been dominant among them. Tomboy had they called Rosalie at ten, for she could ride any horse within miles of Charlottesville, and preferred walking stilts, flying kites or running races to the customary allurements of girlhood. She had one envy, one champion, one idol-her brother, barely two years her senior-and apparently but one sorrow-that she could not do everything that Jack could, and not for lack of trying.

Then as they grew older, and other girls' brothers began showing hitherto unsuspected fondness for Jack's suciety, and coming to see him at all hours of the day, and other girls themselves began making eyes at Jack, her indifference to the first and her fury at the second were comical to see. And then, when the war came on and Virginia sprang to arms and Jack to saddle and his first commission in Jeb Stuart's famous First cavalry, she was all afire with fervor and patriotism cn the one hand and of mad jealousy at Maud Pelham on the other, for on Maud had Jack cast favoring eyes.

And so, when she brought her brother home to nurse and pet and coddle to her heart's content, while she was all soothing sweetness on the side that showed to him, she fairly bristled on the other-that which all well-favored feminine callers, inquirers and friends must needs encounter when they asked to see him. She established a regular roster book and told off the list of the sacred band-her henchwomen, inrelief only to be on duty each day and no outsiders to be admitted. Needless to say Maud Pelham was not of the elect, and Jack speedily showed he wished it were otherwise.

And so this sweet April morning, with a soft, languorous air playing about the wooded, sun-kissed heights, she had two such awfully nice young girls to cheer him, while she herself turned dutifully to another wounded officer, a youth in dark blue to let so good a soldier get right back and gold who had been for over an to business. Neither can we send so hour a silent watcher of the merrichivalric a foe to Libby-at least so ment about Chilton's cot, while he Fred Benton, sat lonely and longing to get far away.

It was not that they were cold, constrained or inconsiderate when speaking to him, but, the doctor had to be much away now; Lleut. Jack was always surrounded by his fair bodyguard; the one man Benton loved, his boon companion Paul, had gone to rejoin his regiment, and the one woman who could have made Benton's stay a world of strange, sweet, watching delight was beginning day after day to show less inclination to approach him at all. A fortnight of watching that beautiful dark face had done its work. Fred Benton was mending in body, but not in mind, for doubly now was he a prisoner.

No Need to Be Jealous. Senator Depew tells of a conversation between two men of his acquaintance, one of whom is the husband of an exceptionally handsome woman.

It appears that one evening after dinner the second man remarked to the proud husband at a moment when the beauty's attention was given elsewhere, 'Old man, your wife is such a beautiful creature that I wonder you are not jealous of her."

"To tell you the truth, I am," answered the husband, frankly and with fine disregard of the attempt of his friend to be facetious. "For that reason I never invite any one here that any sane woman could take a fancy to."-Woman's Home Companion,

"Dear brother, I should like very much to have a tooth pulled by you." "Oh, Holy Father!"

"But it is impossible." "Oh! Why?" said the monk. "Because," returned the pope quietly, "I have none left to pull."-Rome cor. Pail Mall Gazette.

"Yes," was the reply. "But there is one fatal objection. ECONOMICAL DRESSES

WHAT THE CLEVER SEAMSTRESS MAY DO WITH ODDS AND ENDS.

FINE CARMENTS PRODUCED

A Little Talk About Spring Hats and Jackets-The Vital Relation of the Sleeve to the Dress.

HE sumptuous-looking garments shown in the accompanying cut were made from there at end-of-winter sales. The shop-keepers desire to close out old stock for new, purchasers are very glad to obtain pretty things for a song. If you wish to carry on your wave of economy, of course you will not take your remnants to an expensive dressmaker, but at home will endeavor to utilize the odds and ends bought "because they were so cheap;" perhaps there is a waist length here, a short three yards of lace there, a bit of inserting, some embroidery, you scarcely know what to do with. One of the best ways to use such an assortment is in the making of the little dressing sacks and shirt waists, and sometimes an evening waist can be concocted that is surprisingly modish-and surprisingly unskimped.

Bits of lace and fine thin stuffs, both insertings and embroidery, may be put to good use for the chemisettes, undersleeves and deep cuffs now obtaining, as well as for effective bits of trimming on sack or waist. Help for Women Passing Through Change of Life

Providence has allotted us each at least seventy years in which to fulfill The New England $20-a-week clerk who our mission in life, and it is generally our own fault if we die prematurely.

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth. When everything becomes a burden and you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break out into perspiration easily, and your face flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation, and you cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 Garfield Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years in my family and it never disappoints; so when I felt that I was nearing the change of life I commenced treatment wick it. I took in all about six bottles and it did me a great deal of good. It stopped my dizzy spells, pains in my back and the headaches with which I had suffered for months before taking the Compound. I feel that if it had not been for this great med-icine for women that I should not have been alive to-day. It is splendid for women, old or young, and will surely cure all female discr-ders. Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write her for advice. Her great experience is at their service, free of cost.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and-if he cares to do so-can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended-or with what

-or when roasted? If you buy your, coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)

YOU'RE NEEDED

The section traversed by the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Ry. is very comprehensive. From St. Louis, Hannibal or Kansas City to Galveston or San Antonio is a stretch of over one thousand miles of territory, capable of sustaining a population many times that of the present. A thousand industries, soil of various degrees of fertility, a wonderful produce of plants and crops, oil, gas and minerals are to be found. Peopled by eager, pushing, wide-awake citizens who believe in the future of the Southwest and see the virtue of encouraging enterprises of every description and of getting more and better facilities, the opportunity is apparent.

The Southwest is really in need of nothing save people. More men are needed—you're needed. There are vast areas of unimproved land—land not yielding the crops of which it is capable. The same thing in a different way is true of the towns. Few lines of business are adequately represented. There are openings for mills and manufacturing plants, small stores, banks, newspapers and lumber yards. The oil and gas fields of Kansas Indian Territory and Oklahoma are practically new and offer wonderful opportunities for development along commercial lines.

THE OPPORTUNITY IS NOW

The M. K. & T. has no lands for sale, we are simply interested in the upbuilding of the country. We believe in the Southwest; and know that with its present needs and opportunities, the prospects are brighter and the future more hopeful than in the older and more densely populated States. We want you to investigate conditions and satisfy yourself of the truthfulness of this.

On February 7th and 21st and March 7th and 21st, the M. K. & T. Ry. will seil excursion tickets from St. Louis, Haunibal and Kansas City to Territory, Oklahoma and Indian Territory, Oklahoma Central and Eastern Texas, at

You should take advantage of this opportunity to see the Southwest for yourself. We are in possession of all sorts of information valuable alike to the investor and homeseeker. If you are interested, tell us what you want, how much you have to invest and we will gladly furnish the information. Write to-day for a copy of our book "Business Chances." It's free. Address
